LIBERIA CO. SUES CHAMBERLAIN

COLORED COLONY ASSOCIATION CHARGES VIOLATION OF CONTRACT

Andrew J. Lane, General Manager of the Liberia Land & Development Company of Chicago, filed a bill in the circuit court at Joliet on Monday of this week in behalf of his company against F. E. Chamberlain formerly of Joliet, at present in California, to enforce the terms of a contract made between this company and Mr. Chamberlain whereby he was to sell his farm of 446 acres in New Lenox to this company for a colored colony.

According to Mr. Lane, options have been obtained on 809 acres of land in that section, exclusive of the 446 acre tract of Mr. Chamberlain's.

Last Sept. Mr. Chamberlain gave the land company an option on his tract, but later called the deal off on the ground that the Liberia company had failed to live up to the terms of the agreement.

In their bill the Liberia Association claims that Chamberlain has failed to live up to this agreement and the suit filed is to compel him to carry out its terms.

This agreement, according to the bill filed in the circuit court, is dated September 11, 1924, and reads as follows:

"I hereby agree to convey by proper deed, to said Association my farm in New Lenox township, Will County, Illinois, containing about 446 acres for the sum of $56,750, said sum to be paid as follows: $20,000 cash, balance of $36,750 to be represented by bonds of said Association to be issued in aggregate of not to exceed $65,000 said bonds to be due and payable 3 years from date, with interest at 6 per cent payable semi-annually and to be secured by a first trust deed on said bonds and in the event of default in the payment of said bonds or of the interest thereon, I or the legal holders of said bonds, or any of them, shall have the legal right to foreclose said trust deed and sell said lands for the satisfaction of said unpaid price. This offer must be accepted and carried into effect within 8 days from this date. The trust deed, securing my bonds, shall provide that when a tract or parcel of said land is sold that 50 per cent of the purchase price shall be paid to me before said lot or tract is released from the operation of said trust deed, providing Homer R. Kemp and his wife will, within 8 days quit claim to me all right, title and interest which they may have in said lands.

(Signed) F. E. Chamberlain

The Liberia Association claims it was unable to carry out the other terms of the option, the $20,000 cash payment within eight days, because of the alleged refusal and failure of Chamberlain to deliver to them a good merchantable abstract of title showing title of said property, in time so it could be examined within the eight days immediately succeeding the signing of said contract and the Liberia Association holds that it was therefore not bound to pay the initial payment of $20,000 when it was unable to examine the title to the property. The Liberia company further sets forth in its bill that on Oct. 5, and 23rd, 1924 and on Jan. 6, 1925 they made a demand for abstract or document showing evidence of defendant's title to the property, stating that they were ready to carry out all the acts of agreement and to pay all money in said contract required, but charge that Mr. Chamberlain refused to comply with his part of the contract. On October 7, 1924 the Liberia Land and Development Association filed an agreement and declaration of trust in the recorder's office of Will county and also a trust deed covering this 446 acre tract as security for a bond issue of $65,000. A. J. Lane filed an affidavit claiming a beneficial interest in the property based upon the agreement already quoted and upon the strength of that the land company has disposed of more than 100 lots, Mr. Lane states.

In its bill the Liberia Association declares that it secured a quit claim deed from Homer R. Kemp and his wife for a consideration, and turned it over to Mr. Chamberlain immediately after the agreement already quoted had been signed.

On Oct. 20, 1924 Chamberlain filed a trust deed purporting to secure payment of $20,000 due to be paid by said Frank E. Chamberlain and his wife Mary E., in which trust deed Eugene O'Heron is made trustee.

The Liberia Company's bill also claims that Chamberlain wrongfully contrived with Glen Fuller of Plainfield to break and recind the contract mentioned and refused to consummate it and leased his farm to Fuller for one year from March 1, 1925 to March 1, 1926.

In its bill the Liberia Company prays the court to decree specifically to compel Chamberlain to perform the agreement entered into and give the Liberia Land and Development Association clear title to his land free and unincumbered by the lease to Glenn Fuller and the trust deed to Eugene O'Heron, executing proper conveyance of property pursuant to terms of the contract.

According to Mr. Lane building operations are to be started within the next ten days on some of the land now under option. A five room bungalow, an oil station and a lunch room will be built along the Lincoln Highway and will constitute the first units in the proposed colored community.

Tinley Community Club Buys School House for $560

The Community Association movement which was started in Tinley Park a few weeks ago, appears to be going over alright. A temporary association has been formed with A. O. Foskett at the head as chairman and Selby Hirsch, secretary. After a number of meetings a number of members have been secured to back up the project.

The promoters of the association felt that it ought to have permanent headquarters, consequently a plan was worked out whereby the association purchased the old frame school building for $560 last Saturday for a club house. As the building stands on public school ground it will have to be moved. The Reuter Realty Company who are opening a subdivision on the south side of Tinley Park along the concrete road, have offered the new association members the selection of either one of three lots in this subdivision on which to locate the club house.

The Tinley Park Community Association has been created chiefly to promote the interests of the local public school and the community. In other words the new organization will function along the lines of a chamber of commerce or business men's association.

A CORRECTION

Rev. G. Lambrecht, Pastor of St. Peter Evangelical church of Frankfort has called the editor's attention to an error which he claims was made in last week's issue of the News-Bulletin when it was stated that the former's church had contributed $98 to the southern Illinois tornado relief fund which Rev. Lambrecht says should have read $175.00. We gladly make the correction as requested.

New Frankfort School Opened Mon. Cost $38,000

The past week has been moving week for the pupils and teachers of the Frankfort public school as they moved into their new school house and on Monday of this week the new school was used for the first time.

Frankfort can well be proud of its new school for it is modern in every manner. It is built of brown brick and is one story in height. It is built along the bungalow order. The main floor has three class rooms and an auditorium with a seating capacity of 350, which is the largest of its kind in any town of the size of Frankfort in the entire state. The rooms are beautifully finished in oak. The floor is fire proof. The building is heated with steam heat and an automatic ventilation system assures pure air at all times.

The entire building is well arranged throughout and even the little folks have not been overlooked for they have been provided with two large commodious play rooms in the basement.

The building is 98 feet long and 48 feet wide. The cost is approximately $34,000. Baumgartner & Company of Frankfort are the contractors who erected the building.

The modern spirit has so thoroughly invaded this school as to put in oblivion the well known old time school bell for now an electric gong is used to summon the students and this gong has such a forceful call that it can be heard all over the village.

This school has an enrollment of 90 students and this spring 14 are to graduate from eighth grade.

The instructors are as follows: Mrs. J. E. C. Ford, Viola Lanekau and B. C. Saulman, principal.

The old school building which was condemned by the state will be sold later. Condemnation of the old building is what brought the new and modern school building.

Mokena Landmark In Service Again

Mokena's old land mark, the old St. John Evangelical church is a thing of the past. It has been moved the past week from its old site where it stood for 62 years to its new location at the corner of Second and Division Streets where it will be converted into a modern two flat building. The building is 50x70 feet and has been moved without hardly any damage. The lumber in this structure is as good as the best of new lumber of today after having seen 62 years of service.

Many scenes of joy and of sorrow have been enacted within the walls of the old edifice and many of the pastors who preached the eternal Word from its pulpit have also been called to the Master whom they preached and served. Very few people are living today who attended the dedication of the old church 62 years ago. The edifice was built by Mr. Folman who at that time was a well known Mokena contractor who erected many of the buildings now standing in Mokena.

Krapp Bros., purchased the old edifice sometime ago and are now ready to make the historic building serve the community again by way of providing private homes in place of its former mission of providing a church home. Baring fire or storm this building can be of service for 62 years more as far as its lumber is concerned as it would be hard to replace it with equally as good material today.

Bisons Threaten Stampede From Palos Park Fire

A buffalo stampede, a miniature replica of onrushing waves of countless thousands of mad beasts, common to the west frontier days, is believed to have been narrowly averted early Sunday when fire broke out in the Palos Park forest preserve district. Here are pastured a herd of eighteen half wild buffalo recently imported from their native Colorado haunts.

Shortly after the flames, believed to have been accidentally started by a careless motorist, began sweeping through the dead grass and fallen leaves in the direction of the little herd, uneasiness appeared to seize the buffalo.

The leader, a huge bull, threw up his head in alarm and sounded the ancient danger signal of his race to his herd of cows.

Like magic a tremor of terror ran through the herd. The animals became alert with every primal instinct as the smell of smoke bore down upon them.

But prompt action on the part of the county police and preserve rangers averted a possible panic among the animals. The buffalo were steered into a section of the forest where they would be safe from the fire and where the disturbing odors could not reach them.

Later George Michelson, custodian of the herd, hastily summoned by the police, arrived and kept close watch over the animals until the fire had with difficulty been subdued. The presence of the familiar figure of Michelson appeared to restore courage to the buffalo, and soon they were lazily watching the work of the fire fighters as they nibbled at the first grass shoots of spring.

It was only after hours of hard fighting, in which several fire departments sent companies from Beverly Hills and from the village of Mount Greenwood aided, that the fire was brought under control. At one time the flames threatened several stacks of hay used to feed the buffalo.

Subdivision Opened At New Lenox

New Lenox is facing a real estate and building boom this spring. Geo. J. Hacker, cashier of the Mokena State Bank who purchased the former New Lenox Syndicate property north of the Rock Island depot, has had the property surveyed and laid out in desirable building lots. Thus far two lots have already been sold and excavations for two new dwellings have been started. Ceward Batson Jr., of New Lenox is associated with Mr. Hacker in the developing and up building of this subdivision which will mean a great deal to the progress of New Lenox.

Married 52 Years; Event Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. John Oestreich of Mokena were married 52 years last Friday and in honor of the notable event they were pleasantly reminded of the occasion by a little party sponsored by their children Mrs. Wm. Semmler, Mrs. Hugh Deadmor and T. J. F. Oestreich of Joliet. The evening was pleasantly spent in a social way. Robert Oestreich of Joliet, a grandson of the honored couple, played a number of pleasing selections on his trombone. Refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Oestreich were married in Naperville, Ill., in 1873. Both are well advanced in years and despite this are enjoying good health and are still quite active.

Careless Driving Causes Accident

Careless driving came nearly proving serious to two autoists on the Lincoln Highway late Saturday afternoon. Elmer George of New Lenox was driving a Ford Coupe on the Highway east of New Lenox and was followed by Hugh Deadmore of Mokena in a Ford touring car. When opposite the Brick Tavern farm Mr. George slowed down a little as did also Mr. Deadmore, who then turned to the left to pass Mr. George when the latter without a warning signal and without looking if a car was behind, started to run across the highway toward the farm yard placing his coupe directly in front of Mr. Deadmore's car.

The latter, in order to avert hitting the George car, swung over toward the farm yard drive way. Loose crushed stone on the drive way caused the quickly turned car to skid off a culvert into a ditch breaking the right front wheel. With Mr. Deadmore were his sister-in-law, Mrs. Wm. Semmler, her two daughters, Adeline and Ada and her father, John Oestreich. The latter suffered a torned ligament and dislocated bone in his right shoulder when he was hurled against the support of the car top. Mrs. Semmler was bruised and shook up while the children and Mr. Deadmore escaped injury.

Mr. George stopped his car but did not offer to make any settlement. Cooper & Hostert of Mokena with their wrecking truck, towed the Deadmore car into their garage for repairs.

Tinley Mayor Seeks Re-Election

Tinley Park will have a full village ticket in the field this year. A president, three trustees and a police magistrate are to be elected this year. All candidates for these offices must file their petitions with the village clerk by the 6th of April. The term of H. W. Wyman present mayor expires and it is understood that Mr. Wyman is a candidate for re-election to this office. Whether there will be a contest for any of these offices is uncertain at this time.

Frankfort Township Will Vote on Hard Roads Next Tues.

Frankfort township will vote on a hard road proposition at the annual town election next Tuesday. The proposition calls for an annual tax for 3 years of 40 cents on each $100 assessed valuation upon all taxable property in the township for the purpose of constructing gravel, rock or macadam roads to be designated as follows: Beginning at the Sac trail running south between sections 25 and 26, sections 35 and 36 for the distance of one mile.

Beginning at the school house north of Mokena between sections 5 and 6 for a distance of 1/2 mile to Orland town line.

Beginning between sections 17 and 18 and running east for the distance of 1/2 mile in section 17. This is the road running east past the former Elijah McGovney farm and the Joseph Kohl farms.

Change Polling Place at Mokena

The polling place in Mokena, second precinct of Frankfort township, which has been held in the Pfeiffer building for many years has been changed to the Cooper & Hostert garage, taking effect with the town election next Tuesday April 7th.

Outside of the hard road issue there will be very little excitement in the Frankfort township election this year. The only candidates in the field were put up on the Republican ticket as follows:

For justices of the peace, Willard Owen and Frank J. Kohlhaugen. For constables, Wm. D. Knippel and George Aschenbrenner. For school trustee, Jacob P. Bauch.

Minstrels Coming

The choir of St. John Evangelical church of Mokena is going to give a Ladies Minstrel Show in the church parlors on the evening of April 14th and 15th.

There will be two parts, the first part being devoted to jokes, songs and gags, the second part will be given over to a play, "Mrs. Black's Pink Tea."

Reserved tickets are now on sale at the Sippel store, Mokena.

As it fell, the other leaped at her as if strung upon wires. Joan saw, very dimly, the face of Mrs. Dana. She was in her nightdress, with her feet bare, and the ferocity of her attack seemed atrocious in contrast with the expressionless, masklike features. Only the eyes seemed alive, and they burned with implacable hatred, as if they meditated revenge for all the accumulation of a life's wrongs.

The woman bore Joan backward. The lamp fell crashing to the floor in a deluge of splintered glass. A chair was overturned. Mrs. Dana's hands sought Joan's throat, and they struggled in the darkness, crashing here and there, upsetting the water pitcher, smashing into the swinging door. Underneath her Joan heard Mrs. Fraser moving, and doors opening. There were steps on the stairs.

For a few moments Joan felt no watch for the onset of the madwoman. But Mrs. Dana's impulse was soon exhausted. Joan got her arms about her body, pressing down the other's arms to her sides. Mrs. Dana suddenly became passive, and the lights in the eyes seemed to go out like extinguished candles as the brain clouded. Joan got the woman into the corridor. At the farther end a little lamp was burning.

Mrs. Dana went with her quietly, walking like a mechanical figure. At the head of the stairs appeared the matron, wearing a white wrapper. Behind her Joan saw the startled faces of Myers and Lancaster.

The girl led Mrs. Dana into her room, and Mrs. Fraser came at her heels, breathing hard in terror. "Did she hurt you?" she gasped. "How did she get out? Who let her out? I should have told you she was dangerous, but I never dreamed that she could pick that lock. Did she—did she try to harm you?"

"She had a piece of glass," said Joan, "but I took it away from her." "There was no glass in her room last evening," said the matron with conviction. Lancaster was approaching. Joan was astounded to see the look of anger on his face. "Who opened that door?" he shouted.

"It's all right now, Doctor Lancaster," came the matron's voice from within. But Lancaster was shaking with excitement. He swung round upon Myers.

"You are responsible for this!" he cried. "You know my one point that has to be carried out. I told you to have a bolt put on the door after she got out before."

"Now, now, doctor, don't excite yourself," said the secretary soothingly. "You're a sick man, you know. It was unfortunate, but I'll see it doesn't happen again."

Lancaster seemed beside himself with fury, far more angry, indeed, than the situation appeared to warrant.

"She might have killed Miss Wentworth!" he stormed. "I've stood enough from you without this. I've suffered you, God knows, until you've sapped my strength and crushed me under your feet, and made me less of a man than the meanest drunkard in Millville, but now it's ended. Get out of my sight! Leave the institute tomorrow!"

"Say," shouted Myers, "am I responsible if that woman got out of her room? What's the sense of picking on me? Didn't you hire a nurse to take care of your patients. Ain't Mrs. Dana a patient? Now there's been enough said, I reckon. You know what I mean, doctor. Better go back to your room and forget what you've said tonight."

"If ever I see your face after tonight, by G-d I'll kill you!" shouted Lancaster.

Myers slunk away toward the stairs. "O, all right, all right," he answered. "I reckon you'll be sorry tomorrow. But I'll hold you to what you've said. I ain't going to see that nurse bust up any work here."

He scowled fearfully at Joan as he went down the stairs, a grotesque, almost deformed figure in his loose pajamas. But Joan hardly heeded the man. She did not know the cause of Lancaster's sudden outbreak of rage, but she knew that it was part of the whole dreadful problem, and that, in fighting Lancaster's driving devil, she was at work upon the darkest corner of the dark mystery.

"I think, Doctor Lancaster, you had better go and lie down again," she said. "No harm has been done, but I am very sorry you were awakened."

He was leaning against the wall, looking at her with a strange expression upon his face. He breathed quickly, like a man in uncontrollable agitation. Just then the matron came out of Mrs. Dana's room.

"How did it happen, Mrs. Fraser?" asked Lancaster.

The matron snapped the key in the lock before answering. "I don't know, Doctor Lancaster," she answered. "The lock's all right. It couldn't have been picked. And I swear I locked it last night. Somebody must have let her out."

"That hound—" began Lancaster, but Joan interposed. "She may have found a key," she said.

The matron shook her head. "No key would fit that lock, except the right one," she answered. "Why should anyone tamper with that lock?" Lancaster muttered. Suddenly he broke down and covered his face with his hands. His shoulders shook convulsively. Joan put her hand on his arm.

"Doctor Lancaster, you must go back to your room now," she said. "It was nothing, and it is all ended."

"Miss Wentworth, if you will stay with me till six it will help me to master myself. It is not the wear of yielding to morphine; it is my thoughts. If you knew how one's life comes crowding upon one in the darkness—"

"I'll stay with you," said Joan. "Let us wait on the veranda," said Lancaster. "The air is stifling in this house. Put on a wrap and I will wait for you there."

Joan ran upstairs and slipped on her cloak. When she got back Lancaster had not moved from the door. The secretary was packing noisily in his room.

They went outside together, closing the front door behind them, as if to shut in the evil influences in the place.

"The Hound!" began Lancaster, but Joan interposed.

There was a hint of morning in the air, in its freshness, in the paling of the night above the eastern mountains.

Lancaster led the way toward the chairs at the end of the veranda and wiped the dew from them with his handkerchief.

"When you came here," he said, as they sat down, "when on the impulse I asked you to come here, I did not dream that my impulse was the prompting of my good angel."

"You said I was your good angel," said Joan lightly.

"It was more than chance," said Lancaster seriously. "It was the happiest thing that has ever come to me."

"Doctor Lancaster, I am only too glad to have had the opportunity of being of service. It is what every nurse would have wished."

"No," he corrected her. "You have brought more than service into the institute. Do you know what you have brought? Hope!"

She could hardly restrain her tears, so deeply was she moved. She put her hand upon his. "Doctor Lancaster, it must never leave you again," she answered. "Lift up your eyes and look at the hills. How can one help but hope? Hope lies all about you."

"When a man lives in darkness," said Lancaster gravely, "he cannot lift up his eyes. I was broken long before I became a victim of that damnable drug. I fell into the hands of unscrupulous men. I had nothing to live for. I dwelt in shadows, hardly knowing the dream from the reality, and all the men and women about me seemed like shadows until you came. I could endure my life only because of its unreality; it was like a dream, a nightmare, which, I knew, could not last forever."

She did not answer, and he remained silent for a long time. It began to lighten. Streaks of saffron appeared against the tops of the hills. A bird awoke and called; another answered her.

"But this is hope," said Lancaster, taking Joan's hand. "You have brought it to me, and I am never going to lose it again. I am going to win my fight against the drug, and then I am going to regain all else that I have lost."

He seemed upon the verge of a revelation, but he said no more. And now the day was dawning.

"You have made a splendid fight, Doctor Lancaster," she said. "Now you shall have your hypodermic."

He rose up eagerly, and she could see the terrific strain that he was undergoing in the trembling of his limbs, the eager look in his eyes. They went back into the house. A light still burned in the secretary's room, but no sound came from it. At the door of Lancaster's room he stopped.

"Miss Wentworth," he said, "I have something to say, and something to promise. I am not going to take that dose. Tonight, perhaps, but not now. If I take it and free my body from its suffering, I lose my soul again. I lose that hope which you have given me. And—I want to give you this."

He handed her a little bottle of morphine, three-quarters full.

"It is the bottle which you took from the drawer of my desk yesterday," he said. "I stole it from your pocket when you leaned over me last night, when you told me I was winning. I was a thief—but I am a penitent thief, and I restore it intact."

"No, Doctor Lancaster," answered the girl, smiling as she took the bottle from him. "That has no bearing upon your character; it was a symptom of your disease."

"Well, I didn't take any," said Lancaster, with the transient flash of humor lighting up his face. "I had the hardest conceivable battle over that bottle. I set it up before me, and I held my right hand back with my left, and I said, 'I am winning, in Joan Wentworth's name.' And at last the drug devil was beaten. And no more morphine until tonight."

"Doctor Lancaster, you have been brave and wonderful!" cried Joan, profoundly stirred. "Remember that! One of the bravest men I have ever known. Never tell me again that you have lost your power of will. We are winning fast."

He placed his hands upon her shoulders and stood looking at her. Upon his face was an expression of indulgence, as if he was considering her enthusiasm in the light of his experience of life, so much deeper than hers, so much the more profound. Then the look passed; the years seemed to fall from him, and strength came into his face.

"God bless you, my dear," he said, and bent and kissed her forehead.

She turned and ran upstairs. Her heart was singing in her breast. The flood of sunlight that came through the eastern windows, illuminating the dusty interior of the old building, seemed like a spiritual light, flaming into this dark place where shadows had dwelt so long. She went into her room and dressed for the day. She had never felt so happy before. And now the life in Avonmouth had become as dim as a dream, and she cared no longer whether she returned or not. A charge had been granted to her, a man's life put into her keeping; that trust she meant to fulfill.

She had saved Lancaster, and she would outwit Myers, and remove the only obstacle to Lancaster's recovery. She knew the man incited the doctor to drug himself. She would have known that even without the matron's statement to her. But why should Myers wish Lancaster to drug himself to death?

He must be acting for others. Whom? No matter. Once the drug evil was overcome, the plot would be revealed and overthrown.

As she stood at her window Joan heard footsteps on the path below. Looking down, she saw the secretary leaving the house, carrying a suitcase. Her heart almost stood still. Surely Myers had not acknowledged defeat and taken Lancaster at his word? Surely he did not mean to go without another struggle?

She watched him cross the grass beside the chicken coop to where the weed-grown path joined the winding road. He was outside the grounds of the institute now, and he was still going in the direction of the station. He disappeared behind the hedges, appeared again, a long way off, and vanished finally. He was gone, and the air seemed the sweeter, the day more glorious.

Joan almost danced downstairs to the dining room. Lancaster was at the table, waiting for her.

"Mr. Myers has gone away!" she cried. "Doctor Lancaster, your evil spirit has departed, suitcase and all."

Lancaster looked at her gravely. "I know," he said.

"Did he come to you? Did you discharge him?"

"He did not come to me. He did not tell the matron he was going. He looks bad."

"No," said Joan firmly, struggling against her conviction. "He was afraid. You will never see him again."

"You know what the Bible says about the unclean spirit who leaves a man, and returns with seven others, when he finds his home swept and garnished?"

"Doctor Lancaster, he has no hold on you. He can do nothing, and he will never dare to return."

"Well, my dear, we have a respite, at all events," Lancaster answered. "So let us eat our breakfast, and afterward I'll take you for a ramble through the woods, and we'll hold the fort together until evening."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

CANCER DUE TO PROSPERITY

WHAT causes cancer? Nobody knows. But we do know some significant things about it. Ever since the invention of the microscope and the development of bacteriology, thousands of investigators have been trying to find some minute germ which could be held responsible for this awful disease. No one has found it. But we do know that cancer is a disease of prosperity. The simpler and poorer the community, the fewer cases of cancer. The richer and more prosperous the individual, the more elaborate, costly, and luxurious his diet, clothing, house and way of living.

As Williams points out in his Natural History of Cancer, it is seldom found in bodies living in a state of nature. Animals and plants may have cancer but it is practically always the cultivated varieties living under artificial conditions. Savages and wild animals very rarely have cancer. Even monkeys, most nearly akin to man, are immune until they have been kept in captivity for several generations. Yet the dog, probably the first animal tamed by man and the one which has lived longest and in closest contact with man, is the most subject to tumors of any animal.

Travelers among savage people and especially explorers who come in contact for the first time with primitive people, are practically unanimous in saying that cancer is very rare or quite unknown among such races. Medical officers, missionaries and officials all say that cancer is very rare among savages, but that it increases as civilized luxuries and ways of living are adopted.

On the other hand, vital statistics show beyond question that cancer is becoming increasingly frequent in our large cities, that it is especially common among the well-to-do and comparatively rare among the poor and that it is more apt to attack the overfed and the indolent than the undernourished and hard-working individual.

The health authorities of North Dakota, for instance, found that the percentage of cancer among retired farmers who moved to town and quit work was much higher than among those who stuck to their farms and kept active.

So we don't know what kind of germ causes cancer or whether any germ does. But we do know that the simpler life you lead and the longer you keep working, the less likely you are to get it.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

THE general belief is that "colds" are caused by cold. Doctors, health officers and teachers say colds are "catching" and are caused by germs. Which is right? Both.

When a baby comes into this wicked and dirty world there are no germs in its nose. But they appear twelve hours after birth and some kind of germs are found in the nose from that time on. The air breathed in through the nose contains dust, soot, germs, all kinds of things. The nose catches and strains out these impurities, so that the air that goes down into the lungs is clean, provided we know enough to keep our mouth shut and our nose open. Many different kinds of germs are found in the nose in healthy persons. What particular germ is responsible for colds? We do not know. But we do know they are in the air and in our throats and noses practically all the time.

Then why don't we have colds all the time? For the same reason that we don't have any other disease all the time. Germs alone can't cause disease. They must get into the body to do harm. You may and probably often have tetanus germs on your skin but you won't have lockjaw unless those germs find a break in the skin, a scratch or a prick through which they can enter.

Here's where cold gets in its work. Cold air, damp air, fog, rain, drafts and winds lower the body temperature. It's the business of the nose, among other things, to help regulate the body temperature. So if it's very cold or damp or windy or what's worse, if there are sudden and extreme changes in temperature or moisture, the nose has to work overtime. A reasonable amount of extra work it can stand but when it is overworked it gets tired and congested. Then the germs—always on hand—begin to grow in the tired out and engorged membrane, the congestion gets worse.

That's why sudden changes, raw days, fog, dampness, drafts, chilling and other conditions that disturb our bodily temperature and our heat regulating apparatus—plus an ever-ready germ—result in this most common and aggravating affliction.

"These 'ere floods," said the oldest inhabitant, "remind me of th' time when th' old passion prayed for rain. When th' rain did come it drowned two of his best cows, an' washed th' foundations from under th' vicarage. After that he went about sayin' that for th' future he'd keep quiet, an' jest let Providence run th' weather to suit itself!"—London Tilt-Bits.

HELP FOR MOTHERS OF AILING DAUGHTERS

Mrs. Quigg and Mrs. Betton Tell in the Following Letters What Is Best To Do

DAUGHTER OF MRS. QUIGG
210 MAIN STREET, ROYERSFORD, PA.
Royersford, Pa. — "My daughter was sickly from the time she was 13 years old, and when she was 15 she was irregular and also had severe headaches and pains in her sides and back. She was this way about six months before I began giving her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly although she had tried it before. It helped her very much. She is not bothered by headaches, backaches, or cramps any more, and has not missed but one day's work. We recommend it to other mothers with girls who have these troubles." — Mrs. Quigg, 210 Main Street, Royersford, Pa.

Mrs. Betton's Letter

Ridgely, Md. — "I want to tell you how much good your Vegetable Compound has done my daughter. Before she started taking your medicine she was in a nervous, run-down condition, so that she could hardly sleep at night. She always had a pain in her side and sometimes cramps so that she would have to go to bed. She is a schoolgirl and was going to school only half the time because she was so weak and run-down she could not stand it to walk there some days. She was this way for three or four years. She had been reading your advertisements in the different newspapers and she noticed that some of the girls and women had suffered just as she had. So she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and is a lot better. With the first bottle everybody could see a big change. She can go to school every day and can eat just as much as any one else, when before she did not have any appetite. We have told others about the medicine, and we are perfectly willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial. We are also willing to answer letters from other women concerning the help my daughter has received from the Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. JOSEPH BETTON, Ridgely, Maryland.

ORLAND

Orland M. E. Church Notes.

The Ladies Guild met at the church on Thursday afternoon March 26th. The usual "Pot Luck" dinner was enjoyed and the afternoon was spent over fancy work for the bazaar. The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Betsy Austin.

The young people of the church had a jolly time in the church basement on Saturday evening March 31st. The decorations, the games and the stories told around the table were in keeping with the observance of St. Patrick's Day. Another party under the directions of Miss Clarice Mahaffy and her committee was held Wednesday evening April 1st.

The Lenten services of last week were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Creer. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Kay are opening their home for the meeting on this Friday evening. Next week, Holy Week will be observed with services at the church every evening. Rev. Collins is making arrangements for various Chicago pastors to speak during this week.

The members of the Sunday School will bring eggs next Sunday to be sent as an Easter gift to Wesley Memorial hospital in Chicago. If enough are brought, a crate will also be sent to the Lake Bluff orphanage.

The Orland Methodist church raised $75 for the relief of the storm victims in Southern Illinois. The Adult Bible class gave $5, the Ladies Guild $25 and the remainder being given by individuals. Mr. John Loebe was made treasurer of this fund and the money was forwarded to the Red Cross.

The Ladies Guild had charge of the services last Sunday evening. Mrs. David Agate vice president of the Guild presided. Mrs. Edgar Cooper offered prayer. Mrs. Clarence Beagley sang a solo and Mrs. Agate read the Scripture lesson which was illustrated by Mrs. Leonard Kay who appeared in costume as Mary, the sister of Lazarus. Mrs. Collins gave the lecture in connection with the pictures which were of "Enlightened Women in Darkened Lands," showing how greatly Christianity changes the lives of women in Africa and the Orient.

The official Board, by unanimous vote decided on Sunday March 22nd, to install a motion picture machine in the church. The following committee was named to secure the funds by subscriptions from the members and friends of the church: Leonard Kay, Clarence Beagley and Lester Mahaffy. Mr. Joseph Creer was elected permanent treasurer of the fund. Clarence Beagley is to operate the machine and Rev. Collins, who has had a great deal of experience in using motion pictures in a church, was chosen to select the pictures. Due to the faithful work of these men and the splendid co-operation of people of the church, the machine was installed on Saturday March 28th, and the first pictures, "Moses and the Ten Commandments" were shown at the services last Sunday evening. It is planned to use one or two reels of pictures of a religious nature each Sunday night. This Friday evening April 3rd, a wonderful 6 reel picturization of the life of Christ, entitled "From the Manger to the Cross," will be given. This picture will be run twice, at 7 P. M. and also at 8:30 to accommodate the large number of people who will undoubtedly wish to see it. This picture was photographed in Egypt and Palestine. The admission on Friday evening will be 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children, no admission will be charged on Sundays. Wholesome entertaining pictures will be shown each Friday beginning the week after Easter. Sunday evening April 5th a 2 reel picture of the life of Christ will be shown.

In order to protect the eyes of the audience and insure against any danger of fire, the best equipment has been installed. A Simplex machine such as is used in the largest theaters in Chicago and a steel both were purchased. This equipment, if purchased new, would cost about $1,000, but the church was fortunate in securing a used machine in the best of condition.

The Orland Town election next Tuesday will be a quite one, only one candidate, C. Burkhardt, candidate for school trustee appearing on the ticket.

Orland had a forest and prairie fire Sunday afternoon when the former Sedgwick property back of the school caught fire and burned until late Sunday night. A slough also burned out.

MOKENA

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Wm. Lange were held last Thursday afternoon from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Hacker, Rev. Wm. Kreis, pastor of the St. John Evangelical church officiating. Burial in St. John cemetery south of Mokena.

Caroline Lange nee Radloff was born in Amalienhoff, Germany on Oct. 11, 1844. On June 6, 1879 she was united in marriage with Wm. Lange. To this union three children were born of whom two preceded the mother in death. After a short residence in Chicago Mr. and Mrs. Lange came to Mokena and have lived here since. The deceased is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Hacker and other relatives. She attained the age of 80 years, 5 months and 12 days.

Mokena has quite a few delinquent auto license accounts of autoists who have failed to take out their special village auto license as required by village ordinance. These licenses were due on Jan. 1st and the village board is going to take drastic steps to enforce this ordinance. All autoists in Mokena who do not take out the required license will be subject to a fine. Karl Krapp, village clerk, says the board is tired of fooling with the offenders and will now take action against them. All license plates are supposed to be attached in a certain manner, and the village license plate should be affixed to the front of the car as by ordinance required.

All those who wish to angle for the finey tribe in the waters of Hickory creek must arm themselves with a fishing license. Village clerk Karl E. Krapp has just received his 1925 supply of fishing licenses.

Peggy Homerdag, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Homerdag, Mokena and Kenneth Lorbback of New Lenox township slipped away quietly one day last week and were united in marriage in Joliet at the office of a justice. They are making their home with the parents of the groom.

Word comes that Mrs. Val. H. Scheer a former Mokena resident is very ill at her home in Tinley Park.

Alice Lucas who has been clerking at the Walter Fisher store has resigned her position.

Alva Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Hall has been ill for several days.

The new dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. John Mattes is nearing completion.

August Hentsch who recently announced himself as a candidate for the office of school director has withdrawn from the race.

The annual school election will be held at the school house on the afternoon of April 11 from 2 to 4 o'clock for electing a school director for a full term. The term of John C. Nielsen expires and he is not a candidate for re-election.

Frank J. Kohlhaugen is a candidate for director of the non-high school district.

Albert Cappel is the only candidate in the field for the office of director on the Mokena school.

The Don C. Hall Medicine Co., with headquarters in the Hatch hall, have started their spring campaign with an open air show at Rockdale the past week.

Wm. Schmuhl, E. P. Krapp and August Hentsch are in the race for village aldermen. The village election will be held the third Tuesday in April.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Benson who have been living in the Barnes cottage have moved in with the Ed. McGovney family.

Ed. McGovney is confined to his home with a sprained ankle.

Less Cemeteries, Better School Says Worth Booster

Everybody attend the meeting of the Village Board next Tuesday April 7th and protest against giving permit to another cemetery.

Don't let us sell ourselves for a mess of pottage. If these cemetery promoters will build a modern school building for us first, then we may consider the proposition.

Why deprive the living of what they are entitled too for the sake of another cemetery when there are plenty of cemeteries now? Do something for the children who will be the citizens of tomorrow and leave them a heritage you can be proud of rather than a mere city of the dead which is not doing the community the good that a modern school would.

We all know our school house has outlived its usefulness. With two teachers trying to do the work of three. Grades going without their classes on account of no time for them. Half of the pupils roasting around a big furnace in one end of the school room and the other half freezing to far away from it. Ice cold dressing rooms.
No janitor and no money for any thing for school. How can be sell more tax exempt property? Why hit the public school the greatest bulwark America has for the sake of the dead when they are properly taken care of?

With about a dozen and a half cemeteries in Worth township already we have donated enough to tax exempt enterprises.

Worth will come into its own before very long if we stop private interests from dictating to us.

Wake up Worth do something for the living for a change and it will be a benefit for the many instead of just the favored few!

How to build up your Weight

TO BE under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve-power, minus red-cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-blood-cells, you begin to become plus. That's why S. S. S., since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red-blood-cells! S. S. S. will build them.

Ice Age Return Unlikely

There are old-timers who will tell you that so far as the United States is concerned the winters are warmer than they used to be and that a climatic change is taking place. Dr. A. P. Coe, of the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto, has come forward with the further comforting statement that a return of an ice age is quite unlikely. Glacial periods of the past have been accounted for by rather definite physical changes that could be charted in advance if necessary.

Lesson for April 5

THE BLESSINGS OF PENTECOST

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2:38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes People Glad.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Happened on the Day of Pentecost.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Story of Pentecost.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Holy Spirit in the Church.

I. The Day of Pentecost Fully Come (vv. 1-13).

1. Significance of the Day (v. 1). Pentecost is from a Greek word meaning fifty. It was the feast held fifty days after the wave sheaf offering (Lev. 23:16). The wave sheaf typifies the resurrection of Christ (1 Cor. 15:20-23).

2. The Gift—Holy Spirit (vv. 2-4).

On this day the Holy Spirit descended upon the disciples. This does not imply that the Spirit was not in the world before this, for throughout all the ages He has been in the world giving light and life to it. It means that from that time forth He would work on a new basis, having the crucified, risen and ascended Christ to present to the world.

3. Upon Whom the Spirit Came (v. 1); cf. 1:13-15.

The twelve and others, both men and women to the number of 120, showing that the gift of the Holy Spirit was for all believers.

4. The Marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-4).

(1) External.

a. The sound of a mighty wind (v. 2). This is suggestive of the mysterious, pervasive and powerful energy of the Spirit.

b. The tongues of flame (v. 3). Each of the 120 was crowned with such a tongue. Tongues show the practical purpose of the Spirit's gift—witnessing, and the fire indicates the purifying energy burning up the dross and making effective witnessing for Christ.

c. Speaking in foreign tongues (v. 4). This was a temporary endowment for this special purpose.

(2) Internal.

This is seen in the transformation wrought in the disciples. Though a little while ago they were trembling with fear, they now have great courage and self-possession.

5. The Effects (vv. 5-13).

(1) The multitude were filled with amazement and wonder. The gift of the Spirit transforms common men into men of power and influence.

(2) Some mocked and foolishly attempted to account for this remarkable occurrence. They accused the disciples of being intoxicated. The world today mocks men and women who testify in the power of the Holy Spirit.

11. Peter's Sermon (vv. 14-47).

Peter's sermon is as wonderful as the gift of tongues. It demonstrates the presence and power of the Spirit, since Peter was a Galilean fisherman without literary training. His analysis is perfect. He begins with a brief defense and scriptural explanation of the phenomenon of tongues (vv. 14-21). This is followed by a threefold argument to prove the messiahship of Jesus (vv. 22-36). The conclusion is an appeal to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus.

1. The Introduction (vv. 14-21).

(1) Defense of the disciples against the charge of being drunk (v. 15).

(2) A scriptural explanation. He showed that this was a partial fulfillment of that which Joel predicted would come to pass (vv. 16-21; cf. Joel 2:28-32) before the messianic judgment, viz., an outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the salvation of all who call upon the name of the Lord.

2. The Proposition, or Theme (v. 36).

This was the messiahship of Jesus.

3. The Argument (vv. 22-36). It was threefold.

(1) From Christ's works (v. 22). He was approved of God among the Jews by His miracles, wonders and signs which God did by Him in their midst.

(2) From His resurrection (vv. 23-32). The Old Testament Scriptures had foretold the death and resurrection of Christ (Ps. 16:8-10).

(3) From His ascension to the right hand of God (v. 32). The proof that He had ascended on high was the wonderful miracle of the Spirit's operation in their midst, for He had said that upon His ascension into heaven He would send forth the Spirit.

4. The Effect of the Sermon (vv. 37, 42).

Many people were convicted of their sins. Some three thousand repented and were baptized.

The American Sabbath

To say nothing of the divine law, on mere worldly grounds it is plain that nothing is more conducive to the health, intelligence, comfort, and independence of the working classes, and to our prosperity as a people, than our Christian American Sabbath.—Tyron Edwards

PATIENT KILLED IN HOSPITAL FIRE

Blindfolded Man Unable to Escape From Chicago Institution.

Chicago.—P. J. Regan, temporarily blinded by an operation on his eyes, lost his life in a fire late at night which wrecked the fourth floor of the Chicago, Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat hospital, and college and nearly cost the lives of a dozen other patients and nurses.

Regan was overlooked in the mad rush for safety. He had undergone his operation during the day and was still slightly dazed from the anesthetic. His eyes tightly bandaged, he groped, sightless, in the suffocating smoke until he fell.

Battalion Chief McHale stumbled over the body half an hour later and carried it down a ladder to the street. Capt. John Stege of the detective bureau had the body taken to the County hospital, where it was found that the smoke and flames had killed Regan.

The fire started in the basement of the four-story brick structure at 235 West Washington street.

On the third and fourth floors were the sleeping nurses, patients and hospital employees.

Senator Wheeler Indicted on Charges of Oil Plot

Washington.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.), recent candidate for vice president on the LaFollette "progressive" ticket, was indicted by a special federal grand jury.

The indictment, which covers twenty-nine typewritten pages, charges Senator Wheeler and two others with conspiracy to obtain illegal use and possession of public domain of the United States in Montana for the purpose of prospecting for oil and gas.

Those indicted with him are Edward S. Booth, former solicitor of the Interior department, and Gordon Campbell of Montana, an oil prospector.

James A. MacGowan, a fourth member of the alleged conspiracy, was not indicted; as he appeared as a witness before the grand jury.

sound then they must also be sound principles by which the payment of the debts of allied countries to us shall be determined, and we would best apply such a yardstick as our measure, rather than attempt to make popular the slogan of 'every dollar to the last penny.' In the adjustment of our foreign relations, essential to the development of increased export and import trade, there can be no problem of greater importance than reaching a sound and final conclusion as to this irritating question of the debts of allied countries to ourselves."

ADVERSITY A STIMULANT TO GOOD FARMING

An interesting experience is told by Dean Dodson of a Louisiana farmer who was just about breaking even in growing cotton. One day his wife fell seriously ill and was obliged to go to the hospital. A little later his daughter was also taken to the hospital. Before he was through with this experience he was confronted with a bill for $2,200. What was he to do?

Like a good business man he began to figure how he might increase his income and cut down his expenses. He had a few cows that he kept for raising calves. He started to milk these and sell the product. He had some cull potatoes that were unsalable. He fed these to his cows and some pigs which he was able to buy right. Other waste products were utilized in the same manner. In the garden he had more turnips than he needed for his own use. These he sorted, selling the best and feeding the poor ones. He consulted with his merchants as to what garden crops he might profitably grow for the local market.

He figured that he had some idle land that he might use in growing grain and hay. He enlarged his flock of poultry and took better care of it. He was more careful in the use of his auto and saved a considerable sum that ordinarily went for gasoline. By taking advantage of the increased sources of income and by cutting out unnecessary expenses he was able by the end of the year to pay off his hospital bill, and in the meantime had discovered the secret of sound and successful farming.—Banker-Farmer.

SOUND PRINCIPLES FOR ALLIED DEBTS

Payments to America Should Be Guided by Dawes Plan, Says C. E. Mitchell.

The fundamental principles of the Dawes plan for settling the European war debt question are applicable to the problem of the Allied debts to the United States. Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank of New York, declares in an article in the American Bankers Association Journal. Mr. Mitchell says:

"Debts between nations are always a source of international trouble, and I consider it of great importance that our own economic as well as political relations with such countries as France, Belgium and Italy may be improved by an early adjustment of their debts to our own national government."

Country Endorsed Dawes Plan "I hope that we are gradually learning that such debts, if unduly forced may result more calamitously to the commercial interests of our own country than to those of the debtor country. This talk of forcing payment of 'every dollar to the last penny' is commercially unwise. I think we may assume that the Dawes plan has had the endorsement of the American people through their election of General Dawes to the Vice Presidency of the United States. That plan is one that establishes fundamental principles which may be applied in considering the debts of one nation to another resulting from war."

"The first principle, as I see it, is that the yoke of the war debt shall not be held as a burden upon the people beyond the generation that had to do with the war. This principle is clearly intimated in the fact that the industrial and railway debentures which form the principal security and means of payment of the debt carry 5 per cent interest with 1 per cent amortization, which means that such obligations are to be over a period of about thirty-six years."

An Invitation to Trouble "Any attempt to force the carrying of such debt burdens to the second and third generations is but an exaggerated invitation to further trouble. "The second principle is that the debtor country shall be taxed to the limit while the debt remains, but in no event to a point where its economic structure collapses under the strain, and, further, that the nationals of the debtor country shall in no case have a lesser burden of taxation upon them than have the nationals of the creditor country—another principle the soundness of which cannot be questioned."

"The third principle is that with such taxes collected, payments therefrom shall be made to the creditor country to such an extent only as they can be made without disrupting international exchange and commerce. The soundness of this last is apparent on its face."

"These I regard as the fundamental principles of the Dawes plan, and all of the hundreds of pages of the so-called Dawes report are devoted to setting up the machinery by which these principles can be put into effect. "If these principles are accepted as

OAK LAWN

Monday evening March 16th the Oak Lawn Community club held a St. Patrick dance and had a wonderful attendance. Good music was enjoyed and refreshments served free the later part of the evening.

Tuesday evening March 17, St. Gerald's church had their annual entertainment in honor of St. Patrick. We all know St. Gerald's crowd always turns out 100 per cent with a real live entertainment and audience. After a program dancing was enjoyed with Judge Emery at the piano and Mr. McKay, our town barber, accompanying on the saxophone.

Wednesday evening March 18 our school children gave an entertainment under the direction of Prof. and Mrs. Simmons and the teachers of each room. The children took their parts like professionals and great credit is due to the teachers that spent their time producing these lovely sketches and costumes.

The entire community of Oak Lawn extend their sympathy to Prof. and Mrs. Simmons who had to make a speedy trip to the devastated area of southern Illinois to investigate the whereabouts of their immediate relatives after the tornado.

350 Couple Attend New Lenox Dance

The next dance will be held April 19th.

WORTH

WORTH COMMUNITY CHURCH.

The Worth Community church is fast becoming a real factor in the life of Worth. Last Sunday morning the attendance numbered 54, and in the evening the church was crowded. The people of Worth are beginning to realize that the church has something worth while to offer them. This church has made a policy to administer to all creeds and all denominations. Every one is welcome at all times.

Last Sunday evening, Prof. Hewitt of Evanston gave an illustrated lecture on "The New Community Church and Community Life."

This lecture Prof. Hewitt has given a number of times before in other places and has earned him considerable recognition. It was very well received by the Worth people and regarded as a timely and necessary subject. It brought home to each one the individual responsibility that is very necessary to make the community life of this new age worthy of the name of the greatest country on earth—America. The lecture laid a fine foundation for constructive thinking in the upbuilding of communities and its life which has so changed in the past few years.

On Palm Sunday, April 5th, there will be a baptismal service for babies and small children and any one in the community who wishes to take advantage of this service may do so by getting in touch with Miss Ethel Stewart, the cradle roll Supt. or with the pastor, Rev. Sanders.

On Easter Sunday April 12th an opportunity will be given to adults and young people to be baptized or to join the church. There has been quite a number who have signified their intentions of so doing and if there are others the pastor would be glad to be so informed as soon as possible.

One of the outstanding factors that has made for the revival of interest in the church, is the work of Miss Doris Piper. She has organized and trained the church choir and is now working on an Easter cantata which will be given Easter Sunday evening. Miss Piper is giving much time and work to the choir and its results are noticeable.

Old Man on Trail of Mokena Judge

Old Man Jinx is camping on the trail of Judge John F. Schultz of Mokena of late. A few weeks ago fire destroyed the judge's smoke house, several choice hams and slabs of bacon falling prey to the flames. The past week fire again visited the judge's premises. He had built a bonfire and was called into his home by some official business and when he got thru he was astonished to see his yard in fire. This time a fine young grape arbor and two hives of bees were the prey of the hungry flames. The fire spread so rapidly that it came near burning a straw stack in a neighbor's yard, but by hard work the flames were checked before they got that far. Too bad so much good grape juice (wine) as well as honey had to go up in smoke. But this is not all of the woe that has befallen the judge. A few days before the fire he was engaged setting steel posts for grape arbor trellis when a man who was assisting the judge, accidently hit the judge on the head with a 12 pound sledge hammer while driving in a post. The blow nearly knocked the judge out. A deep scalp wound was inflicted.
